

Pennsylvania Web Site Promotes Brownfields Investment

Brownfield property translates into investment opportunity for buyers and sellers alike. That's why the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection launched PA SiteFinder.

More than five years ago, Pennsylvania recognized the investment value of brownfield redevelopment for communities, the environment and local economies. PA's Land Recycling Program was developed to remove redevelopment obstacles so that investors can take advantage of the opportunities in Pennsylvania:

Find A Site. Enter your site selection needs and PA SiteFinder generates property listings that match your criteria. Close the Deal. Get direct access to financial incentives and the expertise of redevelopment professionals to help you turn a brownfield into a solid investment. Success Stories. Learn how the Land Recycling Program brings people, funding and liability relief together to turn contaminated industrial sites into sound investments.

Working hand-in-hand with sellers of brownfield property in Pennsylvania, PA SiteFinder is updated frequently with information-rich brownfield property listings. Bookmark this site and come back often to review new listings that match your search criteria.

Since 1995, more than 800 sites, approximately 20-50 acres each, have been cleaned up - more than 20,000 jobs created and retained. The program was recognized nationally with the Innovations in American Government Award by Harvard University and the Ford Foundation.
